North Dakota Critical Access Hospitals

History

In the late 1890's, bonanza farming was prevalent in the area. The community and surrounding area felt it necessary to have a hospital to care for the sick and injured. The ladies of the Mayville Churches united to form Union Hospital which was incorporated on April 14, 1898. In 2010, Union Hospital became Sanford Mayville.

The first facility was used until the present Sanford Mayville building was completed in 1951. Over the years, many improvements have been made to accommodate the area's medical needs. In 1965, the north wing of the present hospital was added, along with new space for X-ray and lab. In 1976, a new surgery suite, the administrative and business offices, and the front lobby were built and the nurses' station was replaced and the obstetrical department was modernized. A new department in cardiac rehabilitation was established in 1994. In 1996, the nurses' station was relocated and enlarged and a new, covered entrance was constructed in the front of the hospital.

An ambulance drop off bay was added in 2001. 2010 brought the addition of a new four-provider clinic. Sanford Mayville is a not-for-profit affiliated hospital, which means that it has no owners or people who receive profits. However, as in any business, profits are necessary to stay open. There is an ongoing equipment replacement program.

At the present time, Sanford Mayville is licensed for 25 acute care beds with 10 of these beds accommodating swing bed residents. The hospital has complete lab, X-ray, and surgical services with many ancillary services. The hospital's professional staff is made up of physicians from the Sanford Health System in Fargo, North Dakota, who operate the Sanford Mayville Clinic. The clinic is staffed by two physicians, and three family nurse practitioners, and is serviced by specialist physicians from the Fargo clinics.

The city recently built a swimming pool complex with slides, while the Mayville Golf Club is the envy of the area with its beautifully maintained nine-hole course and comfortable clubhouse.
